A Regenerative Approach to Tourism

Our Story and Journey – The people, place, uniqueness and values.

Lomamokkila’s story began in the late 1970s, when Björn family began to rent their own summer cottage for the opera guests at the farm. The location in the peaceful countryside near Savonlinna attracted more and more guests. Meals were served in the family’s kitchen and guests were literally part of the normal life. Meat, milk and some vegetables came from the farm already then.

The number of guests has increased during the years and we have developed the company gradually. From the beginning, the guests have been encountered personally, and in some cases the third generation of the regular guests visits us. Like in the past, guests are welcome to our home.

Our whole family takes part in the business, and the new generation has new, constructive ideas about the environmental protection. We offer summer jobs for local young people, and we favor both local workforce and materials. We still try to emphasize long-term work and constancy in our activity.

Regenerative Practices

Champions Local Places

Our Highland cattle grazes on the meadow and that’s how we aim to preserve Finnish traditional rural landscape. Our forest is grown with the aim of biodiversity.

Benefits Host Communities

We recommend local services such as activities and cultural events and do co-operation with local operators.

Tackles Climate Action

We use only renewable electricity production. We also produce our own energy by solar panels. Heating and hot water are produced by thermal heat.

Empowers Visitors

We provide and inform our guests about recycling possibilities.

In the future, we try to challenge guests to minimize their CO2-footprint by rethinking consumption and behavior during their holiday.

Delivers Long term Sustainability and Profitability

We have hosted guests over 40 years at our farm already and the plan is to keep business profitable for the next generation too. In the future, we continue to follow our sustainability plan and take further steps.

Future Journey for A Regenerative Tourism Approach

In the future, we aim to co-operate more with local farmers in order to support rural communities. We also aim to organize school visits at the farm and inform pupils about sustainable food production and business possibilities in the countryside. We are going to concentrate on more efficient energy consumption and minimizing material consumption as well.
